

Off-The-Glass

Consolidate, integrate...

Your school has likely had a system for charging students for copies for years. But as you implement Pharos Uniprint to recover student, faculty, and staff printing costs, it makes good business sense to update your copy-charging system to form a single, consolidated, document output solution. Using Uniprint in conjunction with Pharos Off-The-Glass, students and faculty have one convenient payment/bill-back method for both printing and copying, your IT staff has a single, centralized point of administration and control, and your school has the same comprehensive support from a proven and trusted technology partner in the higher education market.

Off-The-Glass is yet another example of how Pharos never stops working to find new ways for your school to recover costs, eliminate waste, and take control over your document output.

Network terminals record copy transactions and incorporate data with information retrieved from network printing and can also function as release stations for printing. Additionally, Off-The-Glass resides directly on the user interface of certain integrated multifunction products (iMFPs) for seamless tracking, accounting, and print release.

Key features and benefits

- Tracks user-based copy activities and usage so in an instant, you will know who made the copies, how many copies were made, from which copier, and which account (if any) to charge.
- Charges back copying to departments, by faculty name/number, by grant, or by one or more student accounts, allowing you to prevent copying abuse and waste while recovering costs.
- Provides nine copy reports, four transaction reports, and eight third-party charging reports, so you have the exact, accurate information you need to make good decisions. You can integrate reporting with a full license of customizable Crystal Reports, enabling you to obtain all the information you require while maximizing your current investment in reporting technology.
- A flexible charging model gives you the ability to bill variable amounts based on selected copy features available via the vendor's FDI (e.g. color, duplex, and paper size).
- Supports all major manufacturers of copiers and multifunction products, which ensures a seamless fit into your existing environment. Off-The-Glass is also available embedded directly in the user interface of select multifunction printers.
- Integrates seamlessly with the most common online logon and billing systems, as well as Pharos Uniprint, to capture and consolidate all student and faculty user-based document output activity within a single database.
- Enables more informed purchasing decisions, optimized technology, lower operating costs, and improved worker productivity and student satisfaction.
